The right to one's own image is a special form of the general right to privacy. As a matter of principle, each person may decide for himself or herself whether images of him or her are to be published at all and in what context.

The granting of consent is voluntary. Consent given may be revoked in whole or in part at any time in writing. As far as the consent is not revoked, it is valid for an unlimited period of time. No disadvantages arise from the refusal of consent or your revocation.
